New Craters Now Breaking Out in Many Directions on Martinique.

Graphic Description of Destruction of St. Pierre—Relief Ships Sent—Streets of St. Pierre Cannot Be Traced Owing To Volume of Lava—Stench From Thousands of Bodies—Water Supply Gone.

London, May 12.—The latest reports from the Island of Martinique, this afternoon are to the effect that new craters are breaking out in many directions; that the rivers are overflowing their banks and that a large area in the north end of the island is now submerged.

Fort de France, Martinique, May 12.—Practically every available vessel here has been pressed into service for relief duty at St. Pierre and its environs. Food and other supplies is being hurried to the scene for the relief of the refugees who escaped from the terrible stream of lava. Outside aid is anxiously awaited as supplies here will last but a few days.

The relief parties are today working under tremendous difficulties, a terrible stench arising from the thousands of dead bodies, and aside from supplying the immediate wants of the survivors, all work is centered in disposing of the bodies. Firewood, quicklime and petroleum are used for this purpose. The water supply at St. Pierre is tainted or has disappeared and this necessity has to be transported to the scene.

The rescuers found the refugees in dire distress. It is estimated that a thousand persons who escaped the deadly lava here died from injuries or lack of food, water and care.

St. Pierre is practically wiped out. Streets cannot be traced and buildings everywhere are in ruins, covered with lava and ashes. The vaults of the bank of Martinique are intact. They contain $400,000.

Lava continues to run down Mont Pelee, but in lessening streams. Refugees are transported to Fort de France as rapidly as the present conditions will permit.

No Trace Of Houses Or Streets.

Paris, May 12.—Patrie today publishes details of the situation at St. Pierre, Martinique. The dispatch is dated Fort de France, May 12, and reads as follows:

"No trace is left of the houses or streets, save here and there a blackened wall. The government palace clock was left intact. It stopped at 7:50 o'clock. The vaults of the bank of Martinique were not injured. The corpses of those who lost their lives in the awful wave of fire have been found in agonized attitudes. They are for the most part naked, and many of them had their faces burned off."

Fifty Thousand Are Hungry.

Washington, May 12.—The secretary of state today received from Louis H. Ayne, United States consul at Point-a-Pitre, Guadeloupe, who went to Martinique, with instructions from this government, the following dispatch: "Fort de France, May 11.—The disaster is complete. The city, (St. Pierre) wiped out. Consul Prentiss and his family are dead. The governor says 30,000 have perished; fifty thousand are homeless and hungry. He suggests the Red Cross be asked to send codfish, flour, beans, rice, salt meats and biscuits as quickly as possible. Visits of war vessels valuable." (Signed.) AYNE.

CORPSES

Half Burned by Lava Number Many Thousands—The Work of Relief Progressing.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique May 12.—Advices received here Sunday from the vicinity of St. Pierre (10 miles from here) contain further details of the terrible volcanic upheaval which resulted in the utter destruction of that town and the death of nearly all its inhabitants.

The crater of Mt Pelee has been wearing its "smoke cap" since May 3; but there was nothing until last Monday to indicate that there was the slightest danger. On that day a stream of boiling lava burst through the top of the crater and plunged into the valley of the Guerin sugar works and killing 23 work people and the son of the proprietor.

A commission was appointed by the governor to investigate the outbreak and it returned a reassuring report on Wednesday evening. But about eight o'clock on Thursday morning a shower of fire rushed down on St. Pierre, and the coast from Le Carbet, which had a population of 6000 to Le Precheur, which had a population of 4000, burning up everything in its path.

Throughout Thursday the heat in the vicinity of St. Pierre was so intense and the stream of lava was so unrelenting that it was impossible to approach the town during the early part of the day. As evening approached the French cruiser Suchet after a heroic battle with the heat, suffocation and sulphur fumes, succeeded in making a dash toward the shore, nearing the land close enough to enable her to take off 30 survivors of the disaster, all of whom were horribly burned and mutilated. St. Pierre at that time was and absolute, smoking waste, concealing 30,000 corpses, whose rapid decomposition necessitated, in some cases, instantly completing their cremation, which was only partially accomplished by the lava.

The inhabitants of Fort de France were panic stricken the morning of the disaster, when the sky suddenly blackened until it was as dark as midnight. The sea shrank back 30 yards and hot ashes began to fall, while gravel the size of walnuts poured down on the town. This lasted about 15 minutes. The 450 survivors who were brought here from the vicinity of St. Pierre by the French cable repair ship Payer Guertier from the town of Le Precheur, where, surrounded on all sides by flowing lava, they were nearly roasted to death and expected momentarily to be engulfed.

The work of relief is progressing here on the most extensive scale possible, but in anticipation of disturbances the treasury building and the warehouses are guarded by troops.

The latest reports received here showed that lava continues to pour down the slope of the mountain, slowly engulfing the whole north side of the island while fresh crevasses are continually opening.

All the hills surrounding Le Carbet and Le Precheur (near St. Pierre) are covered with refugees to the number of about 5000, who are being taken away gradually. In the meanwhile provisions are being conveyed to them.

Of the 30 persons who were originally rescued by the French cruiser, Suchet, the majority were fearfully burned and nine died while on their way to the hospital.

The corpses which are heaped in the ruins of St. Pierre are not only completely naked, but are frightfully mutilated.

Strewn With Dead.

Paris, May 12.—The French cable company this morning received the following from its manager at Fort de France:

"I have sent agent to St. Pierre. He was able to find company's offices, which were under a pile of rubbish, but could find no trace of general manager, H. Jallabert, or the personnel of the office, consisting of five men. The town is strewn with corpses, the cremation of which has begun. The cable ship Payer Guertier is now proceeding to repair the cable from Martinique to Hayti and New York."

To Send Help.

Washington, May 12.—The war department is today arranging to send supplies to St. Pierre of food and clothing. They will probably be collected at New York and forwarded on the training ship Dixie. Tents and medicines will also be sent.

EVERYWHERE

Throughout the West Indies Great Tension Prevails—400 on St. Vincent Dead.

St. Thomas, D. W. I., May 12.—Advices received here from the Island of Dominica say that boats arriving there report that many persons were drowned while crossing to Dominica from the island of Martinique. The eruption of Mt. Pelee continues. The lava is progressing northward. The whole northern region is now a rocky waste denuded of vegetation.

Reports from the Island of St. Vincent say that up to the afternoon of Friday last over 200 deaths had occurred there owing to the volcanic outbreak in that island. Many estates were destroyed and steam and ashes were belched forth from 7 in the morning until 9:30 o'clock at night. The eruption is now invisible at Kingston.

Huge dust clouds were blown eastward. Great distress prevails at St. Vincent, where there are many injured persons. It is believed that about 400 persons have lost their lives at St. Vincent. The majority of the corpses are still unburied.

The British Royal Mail steamer, Solent, has gone from Barbadoes to Martinique with supplies and doctors. Great tension prevails everywhere in the West Indies.

TRAVELER

Who Has Recently Returned from St. Pierre Tells of Morne Rouge and Other Towns.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 12.—Prof. J. Stoddard Bellows a prominent Western educator, and whose home is in Salt Lake City, is stopping here on his way home from a tour of the East Indies, two months of which were spent in St. Pierre. In talking over the frightful calamity at St. Pierre, he said:

"One thing that the press reports seemed to fail to grasp or realize and something that makes the calamity all the more appalling is the fact that another village, which was like a suburban portion to St. Pierre proper, was also destroyed. I refer to Morne Rouge, where the wealthy residents of St. Pierre had their mansions. This town overlooks the city, the distance between them being about 1300 feet. I cannot see how it could possibly have escaped the rain of fire and lava, as it was directly in line with the crater."

"North of Mt. Pelee lay Prescheur, with its 1200 inhabitants, while in the east was Basse Pointe. If the eruption was general these two towns must surely have gone with St. Pierre city."

"I have seen some very pretty women in my time, but for that particular style of beauty and grace I lift my hat to the girls of St. Pierre city. The women were mostly slender and willowy; their large, dark and brown expressive eyes looked into yours with interest and feeling; their dark, slightly curly tresses add to their beauty, while their dress, which in color would be criticized for its brilliancy in this country, seems to blend with their attractiveness, making a picture which shades almost all of the Orientals and certainly one that is pleasing and most picturesque."

DESCRIPTION

Of the Horrible Rain of Fire Which Killed Practically All the People in St. Pierre.

Mont Pelee, a volcanic mountain some ten miles north of St. Pierre, the commercial capital of Martinique, is the mountain which made a faint show of eruption fifty years ago. On May 3 last it began to throw out dense clouds of smoke. At midnight the same day flames, accompanied with a rumbling noise, lighted the sky over an immense area, causing widespread terror. May 4 hot ashes covered the whole city quarter of St. Pierre, an inch thick.

May 5 a stream of burning lava rushed 4000 feet down the mountain side following the dry bed of a torrent and reaching the sea, five miles from the mountains in a few minutes.

In its rush the very flood swept in its path plantations, buildings, factories, cattle and human beings over a breadth of half a mile.

As the lava rushed into the sea the latter receded 300 feet all along the west coast.

Terrible detonations, heard hundreds of miles followed at short intervals. The town was lit up by lurid flashes of flames from the mountain. The inhabitants rushed for the hills in their night clothes, screaming, mad with terror. The Plisson family escaped to St. Lucia in a small steamer. Thirty-five persons furnished the above details.

During the afternoon of the 8th the British steamer Roddam slowly crept into the Castries harbor, unrecognized, gray with ashes, her rigging dismantled.

Capt. Whittier reported having just cast anchor off St. Pierre at 8 a. m. in fine weather. He was talking to the ship's agent, when he saw a tremendous cloud of smoke and glowing embers rushing over the town, completely, in an instant, enveloping it in a sheet of flame and raining fire on board his ship. Several of the crew of the Roddam were scorched to death.

By superhuman efforts the steamer backed away and, nine hours later, it managed to reach Castries. Ten of the Roddam's men were dead, burned out of human semblance, among the black cinders which covered the ship's deck to a depth of six inches. Two more of the crew have since died.

Capt. Muggah of the Quebec liner, Rodima, waved his hand in farewell to the Roddam as his vessel sank with a terrific explosion.

All attempts to get to St. Pierre barred by fire. The closest observation possible showed houses still blazing and streets strewn with charred bodies. It is certain that the whole town and neighboring towns for miles around were destroyed. The volcano of the island of St. Vincent has burst out in sympathetic eruption.

HALF MILLION

For Volcano Sufferers Asked in Special Message to Congress Sent Monday Afternoon.

Washington, May 12.—President Roosevelt sent a special message to Congress this afternoon asking for an appropriation of a half million dollars for the relief of the volcano sufferers in Martinique and St. Vincent.

DISASTER

Surpasses All that the Imagination Can Conceive—Large Part of Island Laid Waste.

Paris, May 12.—The Temps referring to the destruction at St. Pierre, says: "We believe from the information received here from the island of Martinique," (meaning doubtless the official dispatches) "that the disaster surpasses all that imagination can conceive. The whole northeastern portion of the island is laid waste. Three large communities, exclusive of St. Pierre, have been destroyed."

A dispatch received from Fort de France, Martinique, says:

"All the hills surrounding Le Carbet and Le Precheur (near St. Pierre) are covered with refugees to the number of about 5,000, who are being taken away gradually."

"Of the thirty persons who were originally rescued by the French cruiser Suchet the majority were fearfully burned and nine died while on their way to the hospital."

"The corpses which are heaped in the ruins of St. Pierre are not only completely naked but are frightfully mutilated."

FRANCE TOUCHED

Paris Paper Refers to Vote Taken by Senate Appropriating Funds for Relief.

Paris, May 12.—The Gaulois, referring to the vote of $100,000 by the United States Senate for the aid of the Martinique sufferers and the sending of an American cruiser to the island, says:

"Of all friendly manifestations the most brilliant and the most touching are certainly those of the United States. The great people beyond the ocean have again proved that feelings of humanity and generosity are among the noble qualities upon which they pride themselves. This fine example of human solidarity touches us profoundly, and we are happy to note it in this unforgettable circumstance."

EXCHANGE OF TELEGRAMS.

Washington, May 12.—President Roosevelt sent a telegram of sympathy regarding Martinique to President Loubet and has received a fitting reply and thanks of the French people from Loubet.

DENSE CLOUD

Of Fog, Cinders and Sand Envelops Island of St. Vincent—Supplies for Sufferers.

London, May 12.—Sir Robert Llewellyn, the governor of the Windward Islands, has cabled the Colonial Office from St. Lucia as follows:

"In continuation of my last telegram my intention was to go to St. Vincent, in a small coasting steamer, but I was strongly advised not to attempt the trip as the steamer narrowly escaped being wrecked Saturday and as the weather was looking very bad in that direction. The island is invisible owing to a dense black fog, cinders and sand. I am very anxiously awaiting the arrival of a warship."

The Colonial Office announces that in addition to the British cruiser Indefatigable, ordered to St. Vincent from Trinidad, the British third class cruiser Pallas has been ordered to St. Vincent from Jamaica with supplies for the sufferers on the former island.

ST. PIERRE

Overwhelmed and Disappeared Within a Few Minutes—People of Another Town Saved.

Paris, May 12.—The ministry of Colonies this morning posted the following: "The ministry of Marine has received from the commander of the Suchet a telegram announcing that this cruiser was able with the help of the Danish cruiser Waliky-Rie and the French cable company's steamer Poyer Guertier to bring back to Fort de France the entire population of Le Precheur. The volcano, the commander says is still in eruption. The town of St. Pierre was overwhelmed and disappeared in a quarter of an hour. The secretary of the Martinique government, M. L. Heurre, has sent a list of the officers and functionaries who disappeared. The names will be published when their families are communicated with."

RELIEF SHIP STARTS.

Brest, May 12.—The cruiser D'Assis today started for the relief of St. Pierre.

GLOOMY

View of the Situation Taken in London—England Points to America's Example.

London, May 12.—The latest reports received here say that the state of affairs at St. Vincent creates grave alarm, especially as dispatches from the Island of Dominica forwarded Sunday, reported that the Soufriere volcano in St. Vincent was still in active eruption. Four small boats loaded with refugees from Grand Riviere, Martinique, have arrived at Dominica in a pitiable condition. They report that six other boats left that village at the same time. It is not known what became of them.

The Standard in an editorial says: "It is only too clear that the area affected is larger than known at first. If Dominica and St. Lucia have not suffered greatly there is reason to fear that their turn may come, nor is it by any means certain that corresponding convulsions have not occurred or may der, but was a tyrant of the most sanguinary type. He hurled his savage Central and South America. In the presence of such forces man is helpless, and we can only prepare to receive the survivors as speedily as possible. The United States has sent us an honorable example."

ST. VINCENT

Vivid Description of the Eruption of Soufriere Volcano Which is Still Active.

Kingston, Island of St. Vincent, B. W. I., Saturday May 10.—After numerous earthquakes, during the preceding fortnight, accompanied by subterranean noises in the direction of the Soufriere volcano, on the northwest part of the island, a loud explosion from the crater occurred Monday last, and the water in the crater lake ascended in a stupendous cloud of steam and exploded heavily.

The noises grew louder continually until Wednesday morning, when the old crater, three miles in circumference, and the new crater, formed by the last eruption, belched forth smoke and stones, forcing the residents of Wallibou and Richmond valley, beneath the volcano, to flee to Chateau Belair for refuge.

The thunderous noises, which were continually increasing, were heard in neighboring islands 200 miles away.

At midday the craters ejected enormous columns of steamy vapor, rising majestically eight or nine miles high and expanding into wonderful shapes, resembling enormous cauliflower, gigantic wheels and beautiful flowers forms, all streaked up and down and crossed with vivid flashes of lightning, awing the beholder and impressing the mind with fear. The mountain labored to free itself of a mass of molten lava, which later flowed over, in six streams, down the side of the volcano, and the greater noises following united in one continuous roar all evening, through the night to Thursday morning, accompanied with black rain falling dust and fatilla scorial, attended with midnight darkness all Wednesday, creating feelings of fear and anxious suspense. On the morning of Friday there was a fresh eruption and ejections of fiery matter, more dust covering the island in some places two feet deep.

The crater is still active as this dispatch is sent and great loss of life is believed to have occurred.

The lava has destroyed several districts with their live stock. People are fleeing to this town, streams are dried up and in many places a food and water famine is threatened. The government is feeding numbers of sufferers from the outbreak. Great physical changes have taken place in the neighborhood of the Soufriere.

Several districts have not yet been heard from and the scene of the eruption is unapproachable. Every hour brings sadder news. The nurses and doctors are overworked.

As a result of the disaster on the island all business has been suspended for three days. The public mind is still unsettled fearing further disaster.

Among the deaths are whole families whose corpses are in several places, still lying unburied. The dead will be interred in trenches.

BEHENZIN

The Imprisoned Ex-Ruler of Dahomey is Probably Dead With His Entire Suite.

Cincinnati, May 12.—The Enquirer today says:

A fact that has been overlooked in the magnitude of the disaster in Martinique is that Behenzin, ex-king of Dahomey, with his court, was a prisoner in Ft. Tarcon, about seven miles from Mt. Pelee, and that dusky monarch and his suite are probably among the dead.

What is of more importance to the French government is that Behenzin's son, who was a ward of France and was being educated to assume the governorship of Dahomey under French protectorate, is probably also lost. He had shared the captivity of his father during a greater part of the time since Behenzin, with his four wives, three daughters, his former prime minister and his servants was incarcerated in Ft. Tarcon.

Behenzin was about 50 years of age, was famous for his prowess as a soldier, but was a tyrant of the most sanguinary type. He hurled his savage warriors against the trained soldiers of France without apparent regard for the sickening slaughter which ensued, and on the day before his surrender, 10 years ago, slew his mother with his own hand in order that she might go and inform the spirit of his father of the disaster which had overcome the royal house of African kingdom. The Dahomeans believed thoroughly in the divine right of Behenzin's blood to rule and the French found it advisable in recognition of this fact, to place Agoliab, Behenzin's brother, upon the throne, under a French protectorate, promising that he should be succeeded by Behenzin's son as soon as the boy should come of age. Since that time Behenzin and his small retinue have been imprisoned in Ft. Tarcon which in all human probability, is now buried beneath the molten lava from Mt. Pelee.

Clara Taylor in Jail.

Washington, May 12.—United States Ambassador von Meyer, from Rome, cabled the state department to the effect that Consul Pearson has informed him of the arrest of Clara Taylor, the woman charged with the abduction of her niece, Margaret Taylor, and of her lodgment in jail at San Remo.

THE QUEEN IMPROVES.

Het Loo, May 12.—Queen Wilhelmina's convalescence has commenced.

THEY ARE LETTING MILES ALONE NOW.

Only a few weeks have passed since the President and the Secretary of War were on the point of retiring General Miles because he talked too much to suit them.

For one reason and another they have failed to act upon the impulse which then moved them. One apparent reason is the fact that many Republican members of the Senate and House came to the support of General Miles and warned his superiors that the proposed attack upon that officer would be resented by congress and the people.

It is possible that there is another and weightier reason.

Messrs. Roosevelt and Root have shown on more than one occasion that they are contemptuous enough of public opinion and that they are able to drag on congress. It must be that some other consideration caused them to abandon their plan to punish the commanding general of the army.

Perhaps the explanation will be found in the fact that General Miles has not yet told all that he knows about the situation in the Philippines and about the embalmment episode of the war with Spain in 1898.

Regard for public opinion and a desire to placate members of congress might explain the circumspection of the President, but they will hardly account for the retreat of his civil genius in the war department.

Only a few things concerning the abominable despotism which Elihu Root has established at Washington are known to the people as yet. Probably General Miles might give them some further information if he were so disposed.

The Democrats are making gains in the West at the spring elections. This shows the political drift. At St. Paul the Democrats have won a sweeping victory. In the local elections in Indiana they made notable gains. In a dozen considerable towns, including South Bend, Terre Haute, Vincennes, New Albany and Bloomington, the Democrats either wrested control from the Republicans or made substantial gains. The time is undoubtedly ripe for a reaction against the Republican party. There is division and discontent at Washington, and this is spreading.

Half-way official statistics are apt to impart less information than error. Senator Lodge on Tuesday last laid before the Philippine Committee a list of 300 officers and men tied by Court-martial for offenses against the natives. That serves partially to indicate the extent of these offenses, but it does not tell how many of these officers and men were found guilty of the charges against them. The complete acquittal of General Smith may well justify the conclusion (in the absence of proofs) that the others were not dealt with more severely.

If Benjamin R. Tillman were a Democrat his raucous and shameless diatribes would react upon his party. He is not a Democrat. He is not a Republican. He is not a Populist. He belongs to a party of which, to the credit of the country, he is the sole member. He is a Tillmanite. There is no other.

An Ugly Secrecy.
(Albany Argus.)

One of the most sinister features of all the so-called Philippine army scandals is the secrecy with which the reports of it all were kept at Washington. Secrecy breeds suspicion. It is human nature to suspect that where anything of a public or semi-public nature is concealed by a public officer there is some unworthy motive which suggests the concealment.

A STANDING ARMY AS A MOB

(Enquirer.)

The standing army raised ostensibly for the purpose of making men free is fast performing a service which has accompanied its organization from the first accord of its existence. It is and always has been recognized as the most insinuating and effective force which has destroyed people in all times and in all ages, when in the name of liberty it has desecrated the altars which it professed to serve, and has wantedly led free people to forget their inherent rights by falling in love with usurpations which lead to a common doom. To turn back the pages of history to a period when our forefathers, with sacrifices of blood and treasure, successfully combated the attempt of England to fasten a standing army on the free citizenship of America, we are forced to the conclusion that the same specious claims which were made by the British Ministry against the American colonists are in complete harmony with the methods adopted by our National Administration to enslave the people of the Philippine Archipelago. If anything, the course of our National Administration is less human in its designs and less civilized in its methods than was the course of the British Ministry in its efforts to enslave the colonists who inhabited the possessions of the English Government on the American continent. In the protests made by the leading minds of the then colonists there is not any thing more clearly set forth than the grievances from which the colonists suffered, and which find a parallel in the enormities which pervade every part of the Philippine Archipelago. The United States authority, properly, is to give the Philippine people liberty. The only aim of the occupancy of the islands is to make them subservient, not merely to national authority, but obedient to partisan interests, as represented by the necessities of the Republican party, which is in control of an irresponsible partisan majority. Their right to select their own rulers, impose their own taxes or hold public place depends entirely on the will, profit or enrichment of those who have been selected by what is termed the superior race, which has taken violent occupation of the possessions of the native people.

It is refreshing to go back to the incipient stages of the revolutionary struggle of our own people, and there read of the reasons which they offered for resisting the tyranny which the mother country tried to impose on the colonists. It is a story replete with illustrations of a brave people, who loved liberty and who were willing to die in defense of principles which were necessary to preserve them from the powerful combination of a Ministry which had determined to capture and enslave the people, as the exhibition is now being made by the Republican Administration to subject the Philippine people to the terrible ordeal which slavery imposes on peoples which for three centuries have longed to be free. In 1768, Benjamin Franklin, on January 7th of that year, in naming the causes for grievances, said:

"They have projected the levying of more money on our own manufactures, as glass, paper, painters' colors, &c., appointing a new Board of Customs, and sending over a set of Commissioners, with large salaries, to be established at Boston, who are to have the care of collecting those duties, which are by the act expressly mentioned to be intrusted for the payment of the salaries of Governors, Judges, or other officers of the Crown in America. Perhaps it may be some satisfaction for our people to know what ideas the Americans have on that subject. They say then, as to Governors, that they are not like Princes, whose posterity have an inheritance in the government of the nation, and therefore an interest in the government of the nation, and therefore an interest in its prosperity. They are generally strangers to the provinces they are sent to govern. They have no estate, natural connection or relation there to give them an affection for the country that they come only to make money as fast as they can, are sometimes men of vicious character and broken fortunes, sent by a Ministry merely to get them out of the way; that as they intend staying in the country no longer than their government continues, and propose to leave no legitimate family behind them, they are apt to be regardless of the good will of our people, and care not what is said or thought of them after they are gone."

Is it possible that this condition is applicable to the American official life of the Philippine Islands? Has our government usurped the governing power of the archipelago, and has it set up swarms of officers, civil and military, who quarter themselves on the native people of those islands ignoring their rights and impoverishing them of their substance? Would it be a truthful statement to say that the Philippines have no government except as it is erected by interloping United States officials? If it is so said, and that is the true condition of that wretched people, it is a matter for amazement that rebellion exists against the authority of the United States? Would our forefathers of revolutionary memory have tamely submitted to that class of government merely because the perpetrators thereof were to call it "freedom?"

Funston's Faded Laurels.
(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

General Funston promptly admits that General MacArthur was responsible for the plan whereby Aguinaldo was captured. Perhaps this locution was in direct violation of the President's gag order, but really it seems to be preferable to a dumb shake of the head.

Not the Same Roosevelt.
(Philadelphia Record.)

Some years ago in a speech at St. Louis President Roosevelt expressed a very unfavorable opinion concerning the Iowa spoilsman, J. S. Clarkson. Now that he has appointed Clarkson to be surveyor of the port of New York efforts have been made to reconcile the opinion of years ago with the appointment. Why should it be considered necessary to explain the affair? The Roosevelt of twelve years ago and the President of today, with an ambition to succeed himself, are two different persons.

BOWSER'S BLUE POSY

GOES OUT AT NIGHT TO SEE A "CROCUS BREAK THE MOLD"

Moonlight Walk Is Halted by Bad Boys, Who Rudely Interrupt His Searching Argument Upon the Frustration of Xerxes.

(Copyright, 1920, by C. B. Lewis.)

THAT there was something on Mr. Bowser's mind as he came home to dinner the other evening Mrs. Bowser saw at a glance, but as he seemed puzzled rather than troubled she held her peace until he should be ready to explain. They had finished dinner, and she had smoked out his cigar as he read his paper, when he carelessly remarked: "Mrs. Bowser, do you know that spring is here at last?"

"Why, yes, of course," she replied. "It is early spring, but when I was a boy I used to go into the fields at this season and look for crocuses. The crocus is about the first spring flower, isn't it?"

"WOMAN, I DON'T LIKE YOUR TONE!"

"Yes, the crocus and dandelion," Mr. Bowser bitched around uneasily and had no more to say for five minutes. Then he softly observed:

"The Romans had a queer superstition regarding the crocus, and there may have been something in it. I presume you have read of it?"

"I don't remember," she answered, looking at him in amazement that he should have been delving into Roman history or paying any more heed to crocuses than to bricks.

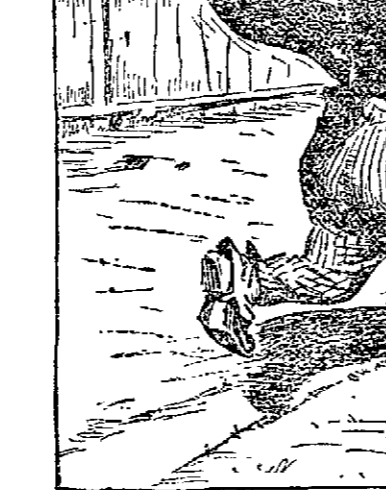

"The superstition seems to have arisen with Xerxes, and it appears that he who went forth on a moonlight night and found a blue crocus was sure to be elevated to power and fame."

"But I thought you said it was a Roman superstition?"

"So I did, and so it was."

"But Xerxes was not a Roman."

"There you go. Always ready to call me a liar at the slightest excuse! If you'd look into history now and then instead of keeping to novels,

HE FLED FOR THE KITCHEN DOOR.

you'd have more sense in your head. Maybe you think Xerxes was a Dutchman?"

"I know that he was a Persian," she quietly replied.

"Not by a jugful!" She went over to the bookcase and took out a volume of the encyclopedia, and, turning to the proper letter, she laid the book down before Mr. Bowser that he might read:

"Xerxes I, King of Persia, was the eldest son of Darius and his second wife Atossa," etc.

"Yes, I see what it says," observed Mr. Bowser, "but does that make the slightest difference to me? When I said that Xerxes was a Roman, that settled it, and all the encyclopedias in the world couldn't change it. It is quite probable, however, that there were a dozen Xerxes hanging around at that time and that one of them may have been king of Persia."

"Yes, that may have been the way of it," said Mrs. Bowser, who saw a way to dodge the threatened row and was quick to take advantage of it. The family cat had figured on rag-time and gave her a reproachful glance as she crunched.

"Whoever found a blue crocus on a moonlight night," repeated Mr. Bowser as he walked to and fro. "I suppose there are blue crocuses as well as other colors."

"I never saw one."

"You never saw a whale, either, and yet whales exist. All the crocuses I have ever seen were yellow, but I never saw any except by daylight. Why shouldn't the light of the moon cast a blue shade over certain spring flowers?"

"I know of no reason why. Were you thinking of going out this evening to look for a blue crocus and become a Xerxes?"

"Woman, I don't like your tone!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he felt the sting of her words. "I can excuse your ignorance of ancient history, you being a woman, but I'll be hanged if you can indulge in sarcasm toward me! If it pleases me to go out and look for a blue crocus in order to confirm or explode a historic superstition, you can bet your life I shall go!"

The cat came out from under the lounge with new hopes in her heart, and Mrs. Bowser maintained a discreet silence. After pacing back and forth for awhile with what he hoped was a Xerxes stride Mr. Bowser advanced to a back window and drew aside the curtain. There was a bright moon, and he could see every beer bottle, tomato can and clothespin lying around the yard. There were pools of water and several soft spots, and it didn't look to be an inviting field for crocuses of any color. He might have given up the idea had not Mrs. Bowser suddenly asked:

"How do you pronounce the name Xerxes?"

"As it should be pronounced, of course," he replied.

"But how?"

"X-e-r-x-es. Have you any fault to find with that?"

"It is pronounced as if spelled 'Zerxes.' You know there is a town in Ohio called Xenia. Nobody calls it 'Xenia,' but it is called 'Zenia.'"

Mr. Bowser turned to her with his face aflame and choked and gasped for a full minute before he could exclaim:

"Woman, this is too much—too much! Do you think my head is stuffed with sawdust? Did any husband ever hear of such cheek in a wife?"

"I was simply correcting you," she said in humble tones.

He glared at her and kicked out his legs to see if they were asleep, but the English language afforded him no words in which to reply. In this emergency he put on his hat and went out into the back yard to look for that blue crocus. He'd have gone if a whole army blocked the path. The cat went with him as far as the door and then halted. Mr. Bowser sent his gaze up and down and around, but he mistook not the yellow labels of the tomato cans nor the blue ones of the table sauce bottles for the spring flowers he sought. At length he wandered forth, stepping into a pool of water at the first stride, but totally ignoring it. He had reached the rear fence in his stroll and had mentally taken note of several weeds struggling for life under the cold moonlight when something whizzed by his head. Some boy in the neighborhood had observed his wanderings and decided to interrupt them with a potato. Where there is one boy there are two—three—six. Mr. Bowser had scarcely resumed his search when those six boys let fly with cans and bottles and chunks of coal. Ajax stiffened up and defied the lightning for about five seconds. Then the lightning plunked him in about a dozen places at once, and he turned and fled.

"Did ye git what ye were lookin' for?" asked the cook as he bounded into the kitchen just ahead of an empty beer bottle. But he did not stop to answer. He was waiting to pour out the vials of his wrath upon Mrs. Bowser. He ascended the basement stairs two steps at a time, but when he stood before her he could do no more than gasp and stutter.

"I wouldn't try to talk if I were you," she soothingly said as she rose up. "Just drop down on the lounge and let me cover you up for awhile. It may be that X-e-r-x-es was all wrong, or that our cat ate up all the blue crocuses this afternoon. Don't worry, however. It won't be long before you can go out and look for the red-headed sunflower!"

PEACE

IN SOUTH AFRICA IS NOW PREDICTED.

"TIMES" RECITES COURSE OF THE NEGOTIATIONS.

The King it is expected, says the Post, Will Exercise Clemency During the Coronation.

London, May 12.—The Birmingham Post today states that important telegrams have reached official quarters pointing to the certainty of peace in South Africa, and that it is a foregone conclusion that clemency would be asked and obtained.

The King, it is expected, will exercise clemency during the coronation ceremonies.

The Times today claims to have from a trustworthy source, the course of the peace negotiations to April 18, and says:

"After the conference at Klerksdorp the Boers proposed that the republic should grant the British demands made before the war regarding the franchise, etc. Great Britain was astonished and referred the Boers to the Middleburg conference as the maximum that would be granted in the way of concessions. The Boers thereupon asked permission to consult with their friends in Europe. General Kitchener refused permission.

"Great Britain intimated that the Boers should make serious proposals or the negotiations should be dropped. The Boers ask for an armistice with a view to consulting the burghers. This was also refused. A warning was given to the Boers that if they returned to Pretoria they must come with full powers. It is understood that acting President Schalkburger gave his unqualified assent to these terms, but Mr. Steyn was more reserved."

Columbus Defeated.

Kansas City won from Columbus Sunday at the former place, 9 to 4, by timely hitting and clean base running. Columbus also lost Saturday's game. The Senators left home a good first, but it is too much to suppose them to win enough games to return in that proud position. If they win a large enough proportion to return with a good position in the first division, they will have accomplished all that any reasonable "fan" can expect.

Cincinnati's Poor Showing.

Cincinnati lost another game through costly errors in the field against great pitching by Doheny and almost perfect play by Pittsburg. Error after error was made behind Currie, until he became rattled and the crowd disgusted. The base ball public is noted for its fickle adherence to the fortunes of a team. This has not been so with the Reds. Newark enthusiasts, with the great majority of those in Ohio, especially the southern and central portions of the state, have consistently "rooted" for the Cincinnati team for years, but the continued mismanagement under Buck Ewing, and the present ownership of the club, have caused all interest in the team's playing to vanish. With Columbus it is different, and the Senators are now attracting all the attention of this large proportion of Ohio base ball cranks. In Newark wherever and whenever a crowd got to discussing base ball, the Columbus team comes in for favorable discussion, while Cincinnati, if mentioned at all, is dismissed from the conversation with some slighting comment. Newark people are attending the games in Columbus as never before, and without exception they are pulling for Grim's Gunners to land the American Association pennant.

Pitcher's Distance Short.

It now develops that the game that was lost by New York to Chicago last week 4 to 0, will be protested by Manager Fogel of the Giants. It has been discovered that the distance from home plate to pitcher's box was several feet short. This fact handicapped Mathewson, who would never have attempted to use his slow ball, had he known the facts.

Fred Clarke's Folly.

Manager Fred Clarke and Claude Ritchey of the Pirates, told Ed Grillo of the Commercial Tribune that they thought, Cincinnati would finish fourth. The "jolly" went, as Grillo used it in his bright sporting column. Sunday. He did not profess to believe it, however, nor do any of his readers. Clarke as manager of the best base ball team in the world, can afford to spread false wherever he pleases, while Ritchey is in the position of a man who can heap coals of fire on an enemy's head and "do good to them that despitefully use you." He was turned adrift by Cincinnati, and is now in the band wagon.

Wright Will Stick.

Cleveland, May 12.—President Kilfoyle of the Cleveland club, said Sunday that Pitcher Wright would fulfill his contract with the local team. Mr. Kilfoyle added: "The National League people, who are using all sorts of methods to get our players away, will find further efforts in that direction extremely expensive. We shall at once bring legal action against Brooklyn, to prevent their playing Wheeler, who affixed his signature to a Cleveland contract prior to signing with Brooklyn."

Yale Defeats California.

In thirteen events contested Saturday, Yale's track team defeated California University's athletes 8 5-6 points to 4 1-6. Plaw of California, and Clapp of Yale, won the individual honors.

Handicap Cycle Record.

Newark, N. J., May 12.—At the Vailsburg cycle track here Sunday, Frank L. Kramer captured both the half-mile open and the one-mile handicap. In the latter he made the remarkable record of 1:57 2-5 for the mile, the fastest time ever made by the winner of a handicap.

Granville Boys Lost.

Ohio university defeated Denison from Granville at Athens Saturday afternoon in the best exhibition of base ball witnessed this season on the Athens diamond. Ohio had made noticeable improvement since the game last Saturday with O. S. U. and with the exception of Matheny behind the bat instead of Morgan the same men played. Ohio's field work was without an error, but Matheny, who was playing his first match game, was unable to give Pitcher Devore the necessary support, and as a result Denison brought home three runs on errors. Denison played excellent ball from the start and the field work was without a flaw. Devore, in the last half of the ninth, stole second, third and home by a terrific slide, one of the most daring pieces of work ever witnessed there.

The score:
Ohio University ..... 0 0 1 0 1 0 3 1-6
Denison ..... 0 1 0 1 0 1 0 2-5

Sporting Notes

Tuesday, June 17, will be Muskingum College field day.

Baltimore is said to have the highest salaried team now playing ball.

Congalton, right field, leads the Chicago National in hitting with 421, while Jones of the regular White Sox leads his team with 312.

The Cleveland team did not attempt to play Sunday, pending the Court's decision in the injunction case against Sunday ball playing.

KILLED BY PITCHED BALL.

Walter L. Myles, aged 18, of West Chester, Pa., was struck behind the left ear by a pitched ball, and died from the injury Sunday afternoon.

Yale's college crew Saturday defeated the Naval Cadets, over a two mile course, in 9:40 1/2 at Annapolis. The Collegians average weight was 174 1/2 to 166 1/2 for the Middies.

The Yale nine comes in for a severe roast in the last number of the semi-weekly published by the Alumni, Walter Camp being one of the editors. The nine is accused of listless playing.

President Ban Johnson says that no more players who jump American League contracts will be taken back. He acknowledges that the league made a mistake in taking Heidrick back.

Under Hanlon "Doc" Newton, the southpaw who pitched wretchedly for Cincinnati, is making good. He only allowed three hits Sunday and shut Chicago out.

Georgetown University defeated Pennsylvania Saturday in a closely played and interesting game, by a score of 4 to 3. The Georgetown pitcher, Blewett, won his own game in the ninth by a timely hit.

Harry Elkes, the speedy American cyclist, was third in the house race at Paris Sunday. Tom Linton, of England was first, and Robt. of Germany second. Linton broke all record for an hour's ride, covering 71 kilometers, 335 metres, or nearly 45 miles.

The Champion Shot Putter. Albert Plaw is expected to break his own record at the intercollegiate track and field championship meeting to be held at Berkeley oval, New York, May 20-21. He is the champion shot putter, winning the title at last year's competition, and during recent trials has shown splendid form.

Plaw is the successor of such weight propellers as Richard Sheldon of Yale and McCracken of Pennsylvania, and, although his present championship mark is somewhat behind the results of their mighty efforts, he gives promise of approaching nearer to them as ALBERT PLAW, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, he grows older and consequently more seasoned. Plaw puts the shot with seeming ease, leading the uninitiated spectators to believe that his work is a "cinch." When the ambitious device attempts to manipulate the weight, however, matters assume a different appearance.

In a trial during the winter on the campus of the University of California, at which institution Plaw is studying, he sent the missile several inches beyond the present intercollegiate mark, but as the test was not officially measured it was not permitted to stand to his credit.

Ethelbert to Run Again.

Ethelbert, winner of the Brighton Beach cup, at two and a quarter miles, in 1900 and the favorite for the Suburban handicap last year, will be trained again this year. He recently arrived at Sheephead Bay, N. Y., from Lucien Appleby's New Jersey farm.

Jack Joyner, who trained the great son of Eothien for two years, will have charge of him again. He is now quartered near his stable mate Flywheel.

Last fall Ethelbert was turned out of training and retired to the stud. He improved so much in the winter that his chance to start training for a few races was then considered excellent by Jack Joyner.

When Joyner reached that decision, Perry Belmont, his owner, entered his great horse in the annual championship, worth $25,000.

Ethelbert will be trained exclusively for this big event. If he stands the ordeal of the severe preparation for the two and a quarter miles, he will start. Should he show the least signs of lameness he will be stopped in his work and sent back to the farm.

Kraenzlein's Resolve.

A. C. Kraenzlein, the famous hurdler, like Marcy Long, the quarter mile runner, has decided to resume active competition in athletics. Kraenzlein has recently become a member of the Milwaukee Athletic club and has begun training. When he announced his retirement a year ago, he thought nothing could induce him to race again, but his love for athletics has proved too strong to resist.

Another thing that has influenced Kraenzlein to change his mind is the fact that an Australian athlete, G. W. Smith, has equaled his great record of 15 1-5 seconds over the high hurdle. Kraenzlein believes that it is possible for him to lower this record another one-fifth of a second.

Futurity Worth $70,000.

The Futurity this year will be worth $70,000. It is the most valuable race in America. On Saturday, Aug. 29, it will be decided, and a fortune will be handed over to the owner of the winner.

When the entry to the stake closed, the Coney Island (N. Y.) Jockey club had received 1,241 nominations. Of this number 305 subsequently became void from various causes, 419 were declared out on payment of $10, 62 at $20, 10 at $50 and 12 at $70, leaving 433 youngsters eligible to run for the stake.

New Thrill of Alarm.

Armstrong, J. Pierpont Morgan says this country is good enough for him.

De Manising—Heavens! Is he going to buy the entire country?—Chicago Tribune.

MARK TWAIN'S BIRD.

Humorist Makes a Confession About One of His Jokes.

HAS NOT HAD FUN HE EXPECTED

He Tries to Explain a Certain Sentence in His "A Double Barreled Detective Story," but the Esophagus Mentioned Therein Still Sours on His Same Old Motionless Wing.

It is a cruel thing when a man has to explain his own jokes. Mark Twain has had to do this because so many people have written to ask him what he means by a certain sentence in his "Double Barreled Detective Story." It was only a joke, Mr. Clemens says, only a harmless, well intentioned little joke, but it has excited general suspicion. Therefore Mr. Clemens has been moved to write a letter to the Springfield Republican, in which he says:

One of your citizens has asked me a question about the "esophagus," and I wish to answer him through you. This in the hope that the answer will get around and save me some penmanship, for I have already replied to the same question more than several times and am not getting as much holiday as I ought to have.

I published a story lately, and it was in that that I put the esophagus. I will say privately that I expected it to bother some people—in fact, that was the intention—but the harvest has been larger than I was calculating upon. The esophagus has gathered in the guilt and the innocent alike, whereas I was only fishing for the innocent—the innocent and confiding. I knew a few of those would write and ask me; that would give me but little trouble, but I was not expecting that the wise and learned would call upon me for succor. However, that has happened, and it is time for me to speak up and stop the inquiries if I can, for letter writing is not restful to me, and I am not having so much fun out of this thing as I counted on. That you may understand the situation I will insert a couple of sample inquiries, the first from a public instructor in the Philippines:

My Dear Sir—I have just been reading your latest story, entitled "A Double Barreled Detective Story," in which occurs this passage: "Far in the empty sky a solitary esophagus slept upon motionless wing; everywhere brooded stillness, serenity and the peace of God." Now, there is one word I do not understand—namely, "esophagus." My only work of reference is the Standard Dictionary, but that fails to explain the meaning. If you can spare the time, I would be glad to have the meaning cleared up, as I consider the passage a very touching and beautiful one. It may seem foolish to you, but consider my lack of means away out in the northern part of Luzon. Yours very truly,

Do you notice? Nothing in the paragraph disturbed him but that one word. It shows that that paragraph was most ably constructed for the deception it was intended to put upon the reader. It was my intention that it should read plausibly, and it is now plain that it does; it was my intention that it should be emotional and touching, and you see yourself that it fetched this public instructor. Alas, if I had but left that one treacherous word out I should have scored—scored everywhere—and the paragraph would have slid through every reader's sensibilities like oil and left not a suspicion behind! The other sample inquiry is from a professor in a New England university. It contains one naughty word (which I cannot bear to suppress), but he is not in the theological department, so it is no harm:

Dear Mr. Clemens—"Far in the empty sky a solitary esophagus slept upon motionless wing."

It is not often I get a chance to read much current literature, but I have just gone through at this belated period, with much gratification and edification, your "A Double Barreled Detective Story."

But was it a ball or a snipe? I keep one myself, but it never sleeps in the air or anywhere else. My profession is to deal with words, and esophagus interested me the moment I lighted upon it. But, as a companion of my youth used to say, "I'll be eternally, co-eternally cursed" if I can make it out. Is it a joke, or I am ignorant?

Between you and me I was almost ashamed of having fooled that man, but for pride's sake I was not going to say so. I wrote and told him it was a joke, and that is what I am now saying to my Springfield inquirer. And I told him to carefully read the whole paragraph, and he would find not a vestige of sense in any detail of it. This also I commend to my Springfield inquirer. I have confessed, I am sorry—partially. I will not do so any more—for the present. Don't ask me any more questions. Let the esophagus have a rest—on his same old motionless wing.

[Comment by The Republican.] "A Double Barreled Detective Story" is the most elaborate of burlesques on detective fiction, with striking melodramatic passages, in which it is difficult to detect the deception, so easy is it done. As the paragraph which has so admirably illustrated the skill of Mr. Clemens' ensemble and the carelessness of readers, here it is:

"It was a crisp and spicy morning in early October. The flames and laburnums, lit with the glory fires of autumn, hung burning and flashing in the upper air, a fairy bridge provided by kind nature for the wingless wraiths that have their home in the treetops and would visit to flung their purple and yellow flames in brilliant broad splashes along the slanting sweep of the woodland; the sensuous fragrance of innumerable delicate flowers rose upon the swooning atmosphere; far in the empty sky a solitary esophagus slept upon motionless wing; everywhere brooded stillness, serenity and the peace of God."

New Greecean Railway.

Greece is to have a Piræus-Larissa railway, which will be a line through her rich but isolated provinces and will connect with the continental system of railways at the Turkish frontier. Iliherio Greece has had no rail communication with Europe.

Mr. Chester in Race.

In summing up the result of the preliminary contest for the Republican nomination for Probate Judge the friends of Mr. John J. Chester are particularly jubilant, and claim with very strong show of reason that their candidate has by far the best of it. He was particularly fortunate in getting into the race early and his splendid qualifications for the place put his friends in the position for securing pledges while the field was uncrowded.

In this contest Mr. Chester has sustained his well known reputation as an organizer of high ability, and as a result every ward and township has an earnest and organized body of enthusiastic Chester workers, interested in seeing their favorite a winner. The fact that he has never held a public office, though for twenty years an unflinching and earnest party worker, is not a small part of their available argument.—Columbus Dispatch.

Mr. Chester is a Newark man whose boyhood was spent in this city.

LABOR DAY

PREPARATIONS ARE NOW WELL UNDER WAY.

Program Not Yet Outlined But the Celebration Will Surely be a Big One.

The prospects are that Newark will have one of the largest celebrations on Labor Day this year of any place in the state, and steps are already being taken to that effect.

At a meeting of the Newark Trades and Labor Council of this city, held on Sunday there was a large attendance, and the matter of properly celebrating Labor Day was discussed in all its various phases. As has been before stated the celebration will be held at Idlewilde Park, Mr. Langafelter having agreed to give the Trades Council two-thirds of the receipts on that day.

One of the features of the day will be a monster parade in which organized labor from all over the state will participate.

The program of the day has not as yet been outlined, but it is proposed to have one of the biggest and most enjoyable times ever had by Newark working people. In addition to the regular attractions at the park there will be a pony circus, bands of music, dancing, etc.

Invitations have already been sent out to all union towns and the smaller towns within a radius of one hundred miles, to participate in the festivities of the day. Mansfield, and Mt. Vernon alone will send several thousand people, while Zanesville, Cambridge, Columbus and other cities will send large delegations.

Committee of arrangements, which has the matter of the celebration in charge, consists of John Sullivan, J. W. Adams, Joseph Fox, Fred Woodbridge and Edward Bloom.

At the meeting on Sunday afternoon Mr. Herman Ellsner who for some time has been one of the efficient district organizers for this district, tendered his resignation, to take effect at once, and Samuel Hupp was recommended as a proper person to fill the vacancy.

Debiture Checks.

Columbus May 12.—"I wish you would state for me, and as a matter of accommodation to the holders of debentures in the Ohio Debiture company," said State Treasurer I. B. Cameron, "that the report that the checks in payment of the allowances were ready and being sent out was premature."

"I don't know how that originated for we have not yet received the report of the master commissioner prorating the allowances, and do not expect it for a week or ten days. We are overwhelmed with inquiries about the checks which is perfectly natural in view of the report that they were being sent out."

In reply to inquiries we have pleasure in announcing that Ely's Liquid Cream Balm is like the solid preparation of that admirable remedy in that it cleanses and heals membranes affected by nasal catarrh. There is no drying or sneezing. The Liquid Cream Balm is adapted to use by patients who have trouble in inhaling through the nose and prefer spraying. The price, including spraying tube, is 75 cents. Sold by druggists or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

When the honeymoon is on the wane many a young Benedict finds himself reduced to his last quarter.

FRUITS AND FLOWERS.

When a limb is cut from a tree, it should be as close to the body as possible, making the cut a smooth one.

In purchasing trees select those that have good, healthy roots and plenty of them. The roots are the life of the tree.

Small fruit culture will always be most successful on the intensive plan. Plant only a small area at a time and give the best culture.

The garden should not only supply early vegetables, but what is needed all through the season, with a surplus to store away for winter.

With apples for home use set out enough varieties to keep up a constant succession from midsummer through autumn and winter and of long keepers to last until small fruits come in.

Paradoxical as it may seem, the man who is his own best friend may also be his own worst enemy.

Bad blood and indigestion are deadly enemies to good health. Burdock Blood Bitters destroys them.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

An Advocate of Cereals.

One of the men who have attracted attention by their utterances apropos of the high prices of meat is Professor H. W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry in the United States department of agriculture. Professor Wiley suggests cereals as substitutes for meat. He says it is well known that men who are nourished very extensively on cereals are capable of the hardest and most enduring manual labor. Meats, he says, are quickly digested, furnishing an abundance of energy soon after consumption, but are not retained in the digestive organism long enough to sustain permanent muscular exertion. On the other hand, cereal foods are more slowly digested, furnish the energy necessary to digestion and the vital functions in a more uniform manner and thus are better suited to sustain hard manual labor for a long period of time.

PROFESSOR H. W. WILEY.

Advantage of Having a Short Name.

N. L. Chew of Indiana, assistant auditor of the treasury for the postoffice department, obtained his position because of his name. This is not due to the meaning of his name. The fact that the assistant auditor of the treasury for the postoffice department spends from forty to fifty days every quarter signing his name to warrants. He signs at the rate of 5,000 or 6,000 a day. It can readily be seen that Mr. Chew can earn more money for the government by signing his name than could Edgar D. Crum-packer, the Indiana congressman. He got the job because he has a short name. He can save three or four days in the month over A. L. Lawshe, his predecessor, although Mr. Lawshe was a very rapid writer.

Poetical Mr. Robinson.

Every once in a while the dull pages of the Congressional Record are enlivened with the outpouring of an exuberant soul. In the midst of prosy sentences these glimmerings of joy shine like a diamond in the somber clay.

"I like sunshine, optimism and enthusiasm," exclaims Representative Robinson of Indiana, for instance. "I love to see the rosy early morning sunshine kiss the dome of the capitol, paint it with golden glory and make it look glad."

No doubt Mr. Robinson loves to see the early sunshine kiss the dome, but it is also a thousand to one that the golden glory never dazzles his sleepy eyes.—Washington Post.

Lord Kelvin Favors Metric System.

Lord Kelvin, the eminent scientist of Edinburgh, who is visiting in Washington, made a statement before the house committee on coinage, weights and measures the other day in support of the adoption of the metric system. Ninety per cent of the people, he said, who had ever given the matter any thought were in favor of the change, and the other 10 per cent he characterized as "stupidly ignorant."

President of A. R. S.

The Army Relief Society of the United States at its recent annual meeting held in New York elected Mrs. Daniel S. Lamont president. The convention was attended by delegates from about thirty branch organizations which are distributed throughout the country. Reports showed that over a hundred widows of soldiers of the regular army had been assisted by the society during the past year. The work of educating the children of soldiers has been extended and is now an important branch of the society's work.

Mrs. Lamont has since the organization of the society been one of its active members, and her election to the presidency is considered only a just recognition of her past services.

BY A CAT

MRS. KROMER, GERMAN STREET, SAVAGELY ATTACKED.

And in Consequence is Now Confined to Her Bed—The Animal Was Finally Killed.

Mrs. Kromer, widow of the late Rev. Johannes Kromer, formerly pastor of the German Presbyterian church of this city, had a terrible experience with a cat at her home, 22 German street, a day or two ago.

Mrs. Kromer had two pet cats, one black, the other grey. The two cats had been engaged in a fight and had been locked up in different places by Mrs. Kromer, and when she went to feed them, the black cat with bristling hair and flaming eyes, wickedly sprang at her.

Mrs. Kromer endeavored to protect herself from the assault of the angry feline, but the animal managed to fasten its long teeth in the ball of Mrs. Kromer's right hand, and hung there until it was fairly torn from the flesh. The cat immediately renewed the assault and again fastened its fangs in her hand. Mrs. Kromer screamed for help when her son-in-law, Mr. Jesse Harter, and her daughter, Mrs. Harter, hurried to her assistance and beat the cat off. Again it flew at her and for the third time attacked her. Mrs. Kromer managed to get her feet on the animal and hold it there until it was captured and killed. The grey cat was also killed. Mrs. Kromer is still confined to her bed from the effects of her injuries. Dr. Mitchell was called to attend Mrs. Kromer.

Branch at Zanesville.

An open meeting will be held one evening next week and the lodge will be organized in about two weeks. Dr. D. H. Crawford has been appointed medical examiner. Ex-Senator W. E. Miller of Newark well known in this city, is supreme president of the association. Zanesville Courier.

Blind Horse Fell.

Acton of the Second Methodist church has been assigned the subject "Good, Better, Best" for Tuesday afternoon, while Rev. George E. Fisher of this city Tuesday evening will speak on "The Anti-Saloon League."

Edw. Burroughs Married.

The Winamac, Ind., Democrat-Journal of May 9th announces the wedding of Edward O. Burroughs, formerly of Newark and Brownsville, as follows: Married, at the home of the bride, in Winamac, by Rev. A. G. Yount, on Saturday evening, May 3, 1902, Mr. Edward O. Burroughs and Miss Belle Williams. The groom is a member of the city bill posters' union and has a lucrative business in the line of posting, painting, glazing, etc. The bride is a well respected young lady of our city. They will reside for the present with the bride's mother. We extend our hearty congratulations to the young couple.

LONG TOUR IN AN "AUTO."

How Dr. Lehwess Intends to Encircle the Globe.

Dr. Lehwess, a naturalized Englishman of German birth, who lives in Paris, proposes to complete this cosmopolitanism by going around the world on an automobile, says a London dispatch to the Kansas City Star. The doctor says the journey, on which he sets out from Paris about the middle of May, is undertaken partly from love of motoring, partly because he wants material for a book and partly because of a keen financial interest in the prospects of increased trade between Russia and England following the completion of the Transiberian railway. From Paris the route proposed is as follows: Brussels, Cologne, Berlin, Warsaw, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Nijni Novgorod, Kazan, Omsk, Tomsk, Irkutsk, Kianschta, then either across the desert of Gobi to Peking and Tientsin or by Nijchinsk and Ghabarov to Vladivostok, according to the political situation in China. From the Pacific coast the expedition will cross by steamer to Japan and from there via Honolulu to San Francisco.

"The car must be a good hill climber to surmount the Rockies," was suggested.

"I don't intend to put it to the test," said the doctor. "We shall proceed south across Mexico to New Orleans and from there to St. Louis, Chicago, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and after an excursion into Canada we shall finish our transcontinental journey at New York. From New York the car will swing on the crane for the last time, and the last lap will be a quick run from Liverpool to London.

DR. LEHWESS' GLOBE TROTTER AUTO-MOBILE.

"The time it will take? Oh, we calculate on being away about eight months. This is not to be a race, but a tour of inspection, and in Asiatic Russia and Japan, where my commercial interests lie, I intend to make very full investigations without any consideration for the time employed in them. Then, again, I intend to see the sights. Thus I expect to be in St. Petersburg for the meeting of President Loubet and the czar. It will be a busy time for the cinematograph man who accompanies me."

The automobile is a Panhard Levasor of thirty horsepower, with a carriage beautifully fitted up to Dr. Lehwess' specification. It is of the Pullman type and has sleeping accommodations for four. It is painted a brilliant yellow with dark red relief and bears the auspicious title, "Passe Partout." Dr. Lehwess will be accompanied on the expedition by Max Oudell, a well known German automobilist; H. Morgan-Brown, an English journalist, who will turn the tour into "copy," his mother's chief, Ernest, and another important member of the staff is his mechanic, who, besides his expert knowledge of automobiles and their vagaries, is a very pretty shot with a rifle.

WHITE GLOVED INSPECTORS

Custom House Men Will No Longer Sell Delicate Clothing.

New customs rules that do away with many of the objectionable features attending the examination of the luggage of persons arriving at New York from foreign ports went into effect the other day, says the Philadelphia Press. Inspectors will wear white gloves so as to avoid soiling women's wearing apparel, and care in handling is an imperative order.

Additional inspectors will be on hand to inspect each incoming ship, and a general effort will be made to do away with the annoyances that have been so common. These and other promised reforms are the result of the work of the women who are banded for the remedying of obnoxious custom house methods in New York city.

Articles of wearing apparel will in future be admitted free of duty under the hundred dollar limit law.

Early May.

The time that hints the coming leaf. When buds are dropping chaff and scale. And waited from the greening vale Are pungent odors, keen as grief.

Now shad bush wears a robe of white And orchards hint a leafy screen. While willows drop their veils of green Above the lumpy waters bright.

New songsters come with every morn. And whippoorwill is overdue. While sparrowhawk gold is combed anew Before her tardy leaves are born.

The cowslip now with radiant face Makes mimic sunshine in the shade. Anemone is not afraid, Although she trembles in her place.

Now adder's tongue new glads the mold, The ferns unroll their woolly coils, And honeybee begins her toils Where maple trees their fringes unfold.

The goldfinch dons his summer coat. The wild bee drones her mellow bass, And butterflies of hardy race In genial sunshine bask and float.

The artist now is sketching in The outlines of his broad design So fast to deepen line on line, Till June and summer days begin.

Soon will Shadow pitch her tent Beneath the trees in grove and field And all the wounds of life be healed By orchard bloom and lilac scent.

A SINGULAR BET

(Original.)

Two men were conversing in a wing of the Winter palace in St. Petersburg the one the Grand Duke Nicholas, the other Captain Dmitre Warasoff of the Russian army. The grand duke was sitting behind an ebony desk; the captain was standing before him.

"Your treachery is an unpardonable sin," said Nicholas. "I have advanced your interests by attaching you to the czar's staff, thus opening to you a career. You have repaid me by joining this diabolical conspiracy against his majesty's life."

"I have not!" exclaimed the captain indignantly.

"Have the proof."

"Let me see it."

The grand duke held before the young man a letter written in the captain's handwriting and signed by him. The accused man started back, a sudden pallor overspreading his face.

"Ah!" said Nicholas icily. "When confronted with evidence, your assurance deserts you."

"I never wrote that letter!"

"It is in your handwriting."

"So nearly like it that I could not tell it from mine. Nevertheless it is a forgery."

Nicholas' eyes flashed. "Who would be interested in perpetrating such a villainy?"

"I cannot imagine. Stop! Let me think. Can it be that they are trying to get me out of their way?" He paused in deep thought.

"What do you mean?"

"I suspect certain men, a certain man especially, owing to an accidental discovery I recently made of an attempt not on the life of the czar, but on yours. It may be that, thinking I would inform upon them, they have determined to forestall my information."

"Whom do you suspect?" asked Nicholas, changing color.

"One of them is my friend. If I accused him, it might be wrongfully. I would rather go to Siberia than harm him if he is innocent."

"You will go to Siberia if you do not give me his name."

"Then I will go to Siberia."

The door opened, and a young man named Pertof entered.

"How fortunate!" exclaimed the commander, "to find you two together! I have heard that Warasoff is in trouble, and I came to say to your imperial highness that any accusations against him are absurd."

"I am sorry to say, Pertof, that I have indisputable proof. Read that!" And he tossed him the letter he had shown the captain. Pertof read it and flung it aside contemptuously.

"The capital is full of plotting," he said. "I believe no accusations, for I am as likely to be accused as any one. Dismiss this matter from your mind. Nicholas. We three are intimate friends. None of us knows how, soon he may fall a victim to intrigue. Therefore let us not worry, but enjoy what of life remains to us. Bring out some of that wine I tasted when we were last together and let us make merry."

The grand duke, though not convinced, concluded to fall in with his friend's humor, and, tapping a bell, he ordered the wine. Pertof raised his glass and said:

"Let us drink to Russian life—short, but merry."

Pertof emptied his glass; the grand duke sipped his; Captain Warasoff left his untouched.

"What's the matter, Dmitri?" cried Pertof. "Isn't his highness' wine good enough for you?"

"I cannot drink under accusation."

"You're squeamish, man. Whoever troubles himself at being suspected or even accused in these days is in danger of nervous collapse. I'll make you a bet of 100 rubles even that within thirty days I will be accused of some conspiracy. I'll make another bet of 100 to 1,000 rubles that within sixty days I go to Siberia and a third bet of 100 to 10,000 rubles that I am executed."

"You are trifling with serious matters," said Nicholas uneasily.

"Not at all. We are all in danger, and if I could make the last named bet it would be an insurance on my life for my family."

"I will take that bet," said Warasoff, with a singular look in his eyes.

"Done," said Pertof, taking his hand. The grand duke looked at both men as if he thought they had taken leave of their senses.

Pertof took a cigar case from his pocket and was about to strike a match when, recollecting himself, he handed the case to the grand duke.

Nicholas took a cigar from the case, struck a match and lighted it. He had taken but a few whiffs when Dmitre Warasoff made a leap for him, snatched the cigar from his lips and, raising a window sash, threw it out. Nicholas looked at him angrily for the apparent insult. In a few seconds an explosion was heard in the court below. All stood mute for awhile. Then Warasoff, pointing at Pertof, said:

"There is the man, your highness, who forged that letter. I overheard him speaking with some suspicious persons upon the subject of an explosive cigar."

Pertof was tried and executed for the attempted murder of the Grand Duke Nicholas. The day after the execution the widow received an anonymous letter containing 10,000 rubles. It was in payment of the wager made between Warasoff and Pertof. The bet was made by Pertof because he had determined to sacrifice his life to the nihilist cause, and accepted by Warasoff because he had loved the girl Pertof had married. Five years later he married his old love.

Appraisalment of the Buckeye Lake Electric Road and the T. & O. C., in Which Auditor Pitser Participated—General Railway News and Local Pickups.

County Auditor A. R. Pitser and the auditor of Franklin county, through which the Columbus, Buckeye Lake & Newark Traction road passes, met at the office of County Auditor Jones, in Columbus, on Saturday afternoon to fix on values for listing this road for taxation. The values as determined were as follows: Power house at Hebron, $50,000; this is more than three-fourths of the all the taxable property of Hebron put together; track (unfinished) $1500 per mile; rolling stock, $250 per mile; moneys, credits, etc., $10.

Appraisalment of T. & O. C.

Auditor A. R. Pitser returned home from Toledo Saturday, where he assisted in appraising the T. & O. C. railroad. Twenty-three county auditors were present, and after a stiff contest, the appraisalment of the road was increased $940 per mile over the entire system. The valuations are as follows: Main track, $7000 per mile; side-tracks, $2500 per mile; rolling stock, $3500 per mile, moneys and credits, $100 per mile.

Santa Fe Using Oil.

The Santa Fe is now using as fuel for its locomotives 118,000 barrels of oil per month, and the Southern Pacific 50,000 barrels. Both lines are increasing constantly the number of oil burning engines.

B. & O. Redistricted.

The Pittsburgh and Trans-Ohio divisions of the B. & O. freight traffic department underwent a complete reorganization at a meeting of the freight officials of the road at Pittsburgh Thursday and Friday. Recently acquired lines were formally absorbed by the traffic department, this having been done by the transportation department.

Chicago division—Sandusky, O., to Chicago Junction, inclusive; Chicago Junction to, but not including Indiana Harbor, Ind.; total, 280 miles; C. T. Wight, division freight agent, Sandusky, Ohio.

Another change made was the consolidation of the division agency at Tiffin with the Columbus agency.

Cleveland division—Cuyahoga Falls, inclusive; Cleveland to Valley Junction, exclusive; Cleveland, inclusive, to Martin's Ferry, exclusive, and branches, including Fairport and Painesville, O.; total, 381 miles; J. O. Galbraith, division freight agent, Cleveland, O.

Chicago division—Sandusky, O., to Chicago Junction, inclusive; Chicago Junction to, but not including Indiana Harbor, Ind.; total, 280 miles; C. T. Wight, division freight agent, Sandusky, Ohio.

Improved Conditions.

We do not know what statistics would show, but we believe that farm labor is now paid better wages than ever before in the history of American agriculture. Good farm labor is scarce. It is wanted, and in order to get it employers must put up the price. One matter is generally overlooked by those who figure on the prices of labor on the farm, and that is the incidental advantages of the laborer. He works fewer hours than of yore, he expends less muscle, and he lives better. As the standard of living has improved among farmers it has improved for their help also. Fortunately for the employer, good farm labor is more productive now than ever before. Improved machinery has made it so, and fortunately prices for farm products are such as to allow some margin of profit. Otherwise the present labor bills would be beyond the capacity of the employer.—National Stockman and Farmer.

Feeding Hogs.

For thousands of years the hog has been capable of living and doing his duty on a diet of grass and hay. In spite of this most farmers have insisted on keeping him shut up in a narrow space to be fed largely on grain. Now we are all learning that the hog is a pasture and hay feeder. He will live and do well on a winter ration of alfalfa or clover hay and roots, and he needs no opportunity to pick up his summer living in a good pasture. We are learning from western stockmen how to feed a hog. It used to be said that the western farmer should come east and learn how to save the little wastes. That is still true in many cases, but the eastern farmer should go west and learn how to make use of wasted opportunities. We need more of the "large methods" of feeding in the east.—Rural New Yorker.

Bottle Indicated Suicide But No Poison Was Found in System—Mrs. David Moore's Death.

Mrs. David Moore of Eddysburg, near Wilkin, was found dead in bed on Saturday evening about 5 o'clock, by her husband, who returned from a field about the hour mentioned. By her side lay her four weeks old baby, since whose birth the mother has been in ill health.

A bottle containing poison was discovered in the room, and at the request of W. T. Willey, Coroner Scott Evans with Dr. D. M. Smith, went up Saturday night.

A postmortem developed the fact that death was due to heart disease, as no evidence of suicide was brought out.

Both Moore and his dead wife were deaf mutes, and lived on the W. T. Willey farm.

Mrs. Moore was buried Monday morning.

As Professor Lawrence Kenner has demonstrated conclusively to the medical fraternity of the city, and the people generally, that he is a past master in the science of hypnotism, and a wonder in his line, our people should turn out and see a genuine hypnotist and enjoy a unique and thoroughly up-to-date entertainment. ## CHAMP CLARK STORIES

Various Yarns Spun by the Humorists of Congress.

An Unpleasant Explanation of an Agonizing Dream—Preacher Offers a Bet to His Congregation—A Parrot That Used a Telephone—A Case of Too Much Coal—Solving a Mystery—A Too Literal Application of Scripture.

(Copyright 1902 by Champ Clark.)

If any one were to call Colonel Charles Fremont Cochran of Missouri "king of the lobby," the doughty colonel would probably challenge him to mortal combat or give him such a tongue lashing as to cause him to pray for the mountains to fall upon him, but Cochran takes kindly to the sobriquet "king of the Democratic cloakroom," which has been bestowed upon him by admiring friends. He probably does more cloakroom talking than any dozen Democrats in the house put together. This grows largely out of the fact that he is an inveterate smoker and out of the further fact that he has a vast assortment of opinions. All of his conversation is not of the anecdotal sort, but much of it is.

Colonel Cochran's Dream.

One day "dreams and their causes" constituted the theme, when Cochran said: "When I was a youth, I was a reporter on a morning daily at Athens, Kan. The newspaper office burned down. The publisher bought another outfit, and we worked night and day straightening out things until we were 'dead on our feet.' One night I lay down on a table in the office and was soon sound asleep. I dreamed an agonizing dream to the effect that I had caught by the bridle bit a runaway horse hitched to a buggy; that he kept going around me in a circle, pulling the wheels over my toes. The pain was dreadful and finally became so intense that I awoke and found a big Norway rat gnawing my toes."

A Minister's Dad Preach.

Some savant once said, "Habit is stronger than nature," and there is a modicum of truth in his dictum. Dr. Samuel Johnson, the great lexicographer, is said to have gone to see one widow for 20 years. A friend asked him, "Doctor, why don't you marry that woman and be through with it?" The gruff old Dr. Johnson replied, "My dear sir, if I married her, where would I go to spend my evenings?"

One of the most learned men I ever knew is Charles Louis Loos, at whose feet I sat when a boy at Bethany college to learn wisdom as Paul sat at the feet of Gamaliel. Professor Loos is now president of Kentucky university and is an eminent minister of the gospel in the Christian or Disciples church, vulgarly denominated "the Campbellite church." When attending college, he had a confirmed habit of saying, "I'll bet you a dollar" by way of emphasizing his propositions. He is an intensely earnest man. Among the first sermons he preached was one delivered at Wellsburg, W. Va. In the midst of his sermon he astonished his audience immensely, amused some and shocked others by laying down some proposition with great force and then, to emphasize it, leaned over the pulpit and exclaimed: "It is true! It is true! I will bet you a dollar it is true!" which cured him of using that particular phrase.

Tale of a Telephoning Parrot.

Mr. Latimer of South Carolina contributes this to the anecdote budget: Once upon a time a certain coal dealer was the happy possessor of a parrot and also of a telephone. He kept both in his office, the parrot for ornament and amusement, the telephone as a means of receiving orders from his customers and transmitting them to his employees at the collieries. In the course of time it came to pass that every time he telephoned an order to his employees to deliver a certain quantity of coal precisely double the amount was delivered.

He charged his employees with carelessness. But they proved to his entire satisfaction that they obeyed orders strictly. They explained that in every case where the quantity of coal desired was doubled the telephone order to them had been duplicated. For instance, in a few minutes after a telephone order came to them to "deliver one ton of coal to John Smith" another telephonic order would come from the office, "Deliver a ton of coal to John Smith," which they construed as an order to double the original order. The dealer denied sending the second telephonic message in any particular case, but his employees convinced him that they were telling the truth, which only increased the aggravating mystery and sent him on a quest to discover the person who was tampering with his telephone.

Shortly after he began his investigation he telephoned his employees, "Deliver a ton of coal to John Jones." He then left his office and returned in a few minutes. Just as he entered the office the parrot hopped to the telephone, rang up the employees at the colliery and said, "Deliver a ton of coal to John Jones." The mystery was cleared up, but the dealer was so enraged that he wrung Polly's neck and threw her out into the yard. When she came back, she observed a half doved cat sunning itself and said, "Whose telephone did you monkey with?"

Too Literal Application of Scripture.

Then Mr. Latimer proceeded: "During the 1900 campaign in South Carolina the whisky question was the burning issue so far as state matters were concerned. It was prohibition against the dispensary system. As Senator Tillman is the father of that system and its most distinguished proponent, he shed his castor into the ring and added fuel to the flames until things were at a white heat. In defense of his pet dispensary system he laid on and spared not. He smote the prohibitionists hip and thigh, and they smote him in return with all their power. It was a battle royal from the mountains clear down to the sea. The prohibitionists made great use of the Bible in their speeches.

Senator Tillman declared that by an ingenious method of quotation anything could be proved by excerpts from the Scriptures wrenched out of their legitimate contexts and settings. This brought down the preachers upon him like a swarm of angry bees. From the bishop of the diocese of South Carolina to the humblest circuit rider in the remotest corner of the Palmetto State they went after the bellicose senator without gloves. It was a ferocious war, in which quarter was neither asked nor given. When the fight waned the hottest, one of Senator Tillman's friends told this tale to support him in his contention as to proving anything by garbled quotations from the Bible: "Once upon a time a good old Christian mother in South Carolina presented her daughter with a Bible, saying: 'My child, I give you this good book as the rule and guide for your faith and practice. You can do anything recommended in this matchless volume.' Shortly thereafter the girl's beau called on her and stayed till a late hour. The mother went to the parlor to tell them the time and found her daughter in the act of kissing the young man. The old lady was furious and ordered her daughter off the place. The latter picked up the Bible and recalled to her mother the declaration that she might do anything therein commanded and then read this text: 'Whosoever ye would that men do to you do ye also to them,' which," concluded Latimer, "was decidedly neat."

Importance of Small Things.

A public in the streamlet sang:
Has turned the course of many a river;
A dewdrop on the baby plant
Has diverted the giant oak forever is one of the finest quatrains in our vernacular.

It states with exceeding force and beauty the importance of small things. The following extract I once received from Hon. Smith McPherson, then United States court judge for the southern district of Iowa, set forth in prose a marvelous tale of how what appeared to be mere trifles affected the destinies of three illustrious Americans. The judge says:

"I have just finished John Sherman's 'Recollections.' I learn that Governor S. J. Kirkwood was for a time a young lawyer with Sherman at Mansfield, O. I also learn that Judge James M. Love and Sherman were, as young men, fellow day laborers as roadmen in some engineering work on an Ohio canal.

"The lives of both 'Kirkwood' and Love show the great influence of small things. Kirkwood once told me this story of himself:

"He announced that he proposed to attend a gathering of people. The feeling was bitter. A friend advised him to carry a pistol that day, which he refused to do. At the meeting he was most grossly and villainously insulted. Kirkwood bitterly wished for his pistol and said he would have killed the man if in his power. If he had killed him, he would have been guilty of manslaughter. Then Kirkwood said to me, 'If I had taken a pistol with me on that day, I should have been a convict in the Ohio penitentiary instead of governor of Iowa.'

"By the change in politics in Ohio the new governor, solely for political reasons, removed the superintendent of the canal on which young Sherman and young Love were working. Sherman and Love wrote the superintendent a parting letter, conveying words of esteem and also of regret that he had been removed. This letter being made public, Sherman and Love were removed. Nothing else to do, they studied law. Sherman became a congressman, a senator and twice a cabinet officer. Love became a great lawyer and as great a judge as ever occupied a bench west of the Alleghenies. He was simple in his habits and as pure as a good woman. 'The one was a radical Republican and the other an uncompromising Democrat, but their friendship was always close.

"The careers of both Sherman and Love commenced in the writing of this letter of regret."

Colonel Wintersmith's Story.

Hon. Hugh A. Dismore of Arkansas, who was minister plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary to Korea under Cleveland and who is now the ranking Democrat on the great committee on foreign affairs, contributed this to the cloakroom:

"One of the most elegant and kindly gentlemen I ever knew was Colonel E. C. Boudinot, who was half Cherokee Indian. He was graceful in manner, brilliant in conversation and popular with all who knew him, especially with the ladies. He was slightly lame by reason of having had the white swelling.

"Colonel Dick Wintersmith of Kentucky is one of the most incorrigible wags that ever lived. He and Boudinot were bosom cronies. Boudinot was visiting Wintersmith and was introduced by his host to a bevy of Blue Grass belles. They were fascinated by Boudinot's charm of manner. After chatting with them awhile he excused himself and started to walk away. One of the ladies said sotto voce, 'Why, Colonel Wintersmith, Colonel Boudinot is lame?' 'Oh, yes?' replied Wintersmith. 'They had to shoot him in order to catch him. When I first knew him he was a wild savage, which greatly shocked the ladies and which Wintersmith always told for the merriment of his friends.'

MOVEMENT

On Foot in Mt. Vernon to Organize a Company of the Ohio National Guard.

(Mt. Vernon Banner.)
A movement is on foot among a number of young men of Mt. Vernon to organize a company for service in the national guard of Ohio. Captain George B. Kelly and Mr. Jason Davis are very much interested in getting up a company and application will be made for the company to enter the service of the Fourth Ohio. There are now two vacancies in the Fourth Ohio, and Captain Kelly has written to Colonel A. B. Coit asking if a company may be organized in Mt. Vernon and become part of the Fourth Ohio. Several parties interested in the movement have secured an option on Kirk hall which would be used as an armory should the company be organized. The state allows $400 per year for the maintenance of the company.

Mr. Lawyer of Thornville.

(Columbus Press.)
Glenn Lawyer, the Thornville man who is held in quarantine at the Huston flats, Washington and Franklin avenues, denies emphatically the stories about concerning himself. He says that he came to the city to be quarantined here because he did not desire to have his people at home placed in quarantine, and that would have been done by the state authorities. He said that the report that he had been exposed to smallpox had alarmed his people and he had received several letters. He said that the alleged "romantic episode" of his being a suitor of Miss Hoagland was farfetched. He had roomed in the flats on the second floor above where Miss Hoagland had roomed but he knew her when he saw her and that was all. He said all the exposure he had undergone was the exposure perhaps of passing Miss Hoagland in the hall or of speaking to her when he saw her.

Thousands of Cures Made by

PAINE'S Celery Compound

Should Convince You of Its Value.

"What you do, do it well," is the golden rule of business life. This rule and far reaching command can be profitably observed in many other conditions of life. In sickness and suffering it is all important that "what you do" to banish disease and restore lost health, should be well done. While prudence and common sense will, in nearly every instance direct you aright the experience of your friends and neighbors and the thousands rescued from sickness and suffering, will point directly to Paine's Celery Compound as the infallible health giver.

People who think they will get rid of troubles such as rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia and nervous disorders by medicines which have not yet passed the experimental stage, will be sadly disappointed and find their sufferings increased.

To get rid of rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, and nervous complaints, it is wisdom to use Paine's Celery Compound, a medicine that proceeds at once to make the appetite normal, sleep natural and refreshing, the nerves strong, as a foundation for building up health and vigor.

If sick people in May lack for a true nerve strengthener, an honest blood purifier, a reliable diuretic, that will restore strength, renew vitality, regulate the kidneys, liver, and bowels they should at once make use of Paine's Celery Compound and note the speedy and pleasing results that flow from its use.

New York, May 12.—A Washington dispatch to the Herald is as follows:

"The newspapers have given you the issue, gentlemen—the disclosures about the Beef Trust. The people in this country are not giving much thought to the water cures and the sand cures, but they are doing some very hard thinking about the Beef Trust. The women are going to have a voice in the coming campaign, and if you have any doubt as to how killing the price of beef affects the housekeepers go down to Lexington Market, in Baltimore, Saturday night, and hear what the women have to say to their husbands."

This is the kind of talk Senator-elect A. P. Gorman, of Maryland has been indulging in at his conferences with the members of the Democratic Congressional Committee. Senator Gorman has from the very first been deeply impressed with the magnitude of the exposures as a factor in the approaching campaign. He told Representative Griggs of Pennsylvania the Chairman of the Democratic Congressional committee, that the committee would be acting wisely if it based the bulk of its campaign literature on the beef exposures. He has made no secret of his impressions upon this point. He has talked with hundreds of public men about the importance of the trust issue to the Democratic party, and has always emphasized the information about the meat octopus.

The Democratic Congressional Committee was so deeply impressed by the practical advice and suggestions of Mr. Gorman that steps have already been taken to make the Beef Trust conspicuous in the approaching campaign. It is the intention to supply every home in the United States with all the information obtainable bearing upon the unreasonable and unjustifiable increase in the price of fresh meat to the consumer. The campaign creators will be loaded with data on the same subject, so that every man, woman and child in this country will be made familiar with the inside working of the Beef Trust.

AN AIRSHIP DISASTER AT PARIS TODAY

TWO AERONAUTS WHO WERE ON BOARD KILLED.

Successful Trial Trip Was Made a Week Ago—Not Unlike Dumont's Airship.

Paris, May 12.—The airship belonging to Senor Augusto Severo, the Brazilian aeronaut, made an ascension today. The airship exploded and two aeronauts on board were killed.

Severo was dashed to death before the eyes of his wife and family who were watching the ascent at 6 o'clock today.

Senor Severo's airship was called La Paix. It was not unlike Santos Dumont's airships in appearance, but it differed from them in many details. The gas capacity of La Paix was nearly four times greater than that of Santos Dumont's airships. It had three main propellers and two smaller ones used for steering and in ascending and descending. The two petroleum motors of La Paix were of 24 and 15 horse power, respectively.

His trial trip was made a week ago, and was successful, despite threatening weather. The balloon held by a rope, ascending 40 meters, the motors were then started. The balloon obeyed the impulse of the propellers, steering easily and maintaining perfect equilibrium. After maneuvering for a short time, Senor Severo safely returned the airship to its shed. The few persons who were present at the park enthusiastically applauded Senor Severo and the two assistants who accompanied him in the ascent.

Senor Augusto Severo has occupied himself with the problems of air flying for more than 20 years. In 1881 he carried out some interesting steerable kite experiments in Brazil. In 1894 he constructed a large steerable balloon, but the results with this were not satisfactory.

Senor Severo was at one time a deputy and president of the budget committee in the parliament at Rio Janeiro. He was born about 40 years ago. Senor Severo arrived at Paris with a flying machine last November. He then announced his intention to sail around and across Paris. His last balloon is described as carrying a car shaped like a long parallelogram, drawn up directly beneath the balloon. The balloon is rigid, the cover cannot crumple or cave in, and it does not tip like that of Santos Dumont.

Paris, May 12.—M. Severo, who fell from his exploded airship, struck the ground with such force that smashed pieces of bone from his legs were forced through his shoes. He was burned to death before reaching the ground.

GOOD YARNS FROM WASHINGTON

[Special Correspondence.]

Washington, May 12.—Now that "something else equally good" has been provided for Pensioner Commissioner Evans—he is to succeed the late William McKinley Osborne as consul general at London—Eugene F. Ware takes the place at the head of the pension bureau, for which he was selected some weeks ago by President Roosevelt. Whether or not Gene Ware is just exactly the man the Kansas Republican politicians wanted to have appointed to this position has been a matter of not a little comment about the capital. There is no doubt, however, that he is popular with the Kansas delegation in congress and well liked personally by all who know him.

"FETCH ME HALF AN APPLE PIE."

In the Sunflower State and outside of it. Besides being something of a poet Ware is a clever story teller and likewise enjoys a good story when told by some one else at his expense.

Representative Long of the Seventh Kansas district says that once last summer Gene Ware was in New York with George R. Peck of Chicago and Charles S. Gleed of Topeka, both well known railroad men. His companions took Ware to Delmonico's. Peck and Gleed ordered everything expensive on the bill of fare, thinking to astonish Ware. When the waiter handed Ware the menu card, the latter gazed at it critically for a time and then said:

"Fetch me half an apple pie, and be sure to leave the pie in the plate in which it was baked; then fetch me a spoon to eat the pie with and a pint of milk and a pint of cream mixed. That's all."

"Gene," said Gleed, "that's no sort of grub to eat in New York."

"Maybe not," replied Ware, "but I eat it at home, and I'm not going to put on airs here."

Senator Hanna likes good things to eat, but unhappily sometimes he has indigestion, which interferes with his epicurean tastes. The other day he was at luncheon in the senate restaurant when Senator Burrows came in and sat down beside him. The Ohio senator had ordered a light repast, though he evidently longed for some of the richer and less digestible morsels on the bill of fare.

"Do you know," he said to the Michigan senator, "I have one ambition in life, an ambition that is paramount to all others?"

"The presidency?" asked Burrows good naturedly.

"No," said the senator.

"Well, what then?"

"I should like to eat everything the palate could wish, the finest dishes that could be prepared, and—"

"And what?" asked Burrows.

"I should like to have the work of digestion devolve upon some Democrat."

An old gentleman was wandering through the old library portion of the capitol the other day. He was lost. Presently he met a senator.

"I want to go to Senator Quay's room," said the old gentleman, "and I have lost my way. Can you help me?"

"Certainly," was the reply. "I will show you."

The senator carefully piloted the old gentleman through the devious passageways, helped him into the elevator and finally conducted him into Senator Quay's committee room.

"This is Senator Quay's room," he said to the stranger. "Whom do you want to see?"

"Senator Quay," was the response.

"I am Mr. Quay," said the senator.

The old gentleman nearly collapsed, but expressed with great sincerity his gratitude for the senator's courtesy.

Occasionally Senator Pettus entertains his colleagues in the Democratic cloakroom with stories of his experiences on an overland trip which he made on horseback from Selma, Ala., to California more than fifty years ago. The other day Senator Bacon of Georgia pestered him for a story, but the venerable Alabamian did not feel like telling one. Finally he said:

"I remember once when the whole outfit was captured by Indians. It was an exciting experience, but I'll have to make the story very short, because I have some letters to write. The Indians took us, tied us to trees, built fires around us and left us to our fate."

"Heavens!" said Senator Bacon. "How did you escape?"

"We didn't," said Senator Pettus as he arose to go. "We were burned to death."

The Georgia senator took the hint.

There was a circus in town recently and of course the usual street parade.

More than one congressman watched with boyish delight the passing of the glittering procession, and no doubt some of them found their way into the tent at the evening performance.

Representative Dovenor of West Virginia was coming down town on a street car with a colleague and reached New York avenue just as the circus procession came in sight on an intersecting street. Mr. Dovenor turned all the way around in his seat to get a good look at the lovely ladies in tin armor, the red and gold chariots and the richly caparisoned elephants and camels.

"Say," he said to his companion, "let's get off here." The companion was too much engrossed in watching the approach of the pageant to reply.

Dovenor repeated the suggestion, but still his companion made no reply.

"Well, I can't help it," finally exclaimed the West Virginia member. "I must see the show."

And, with all the enthusiasm of a boy, he skipped off the car and stood entranced on the pavement until the steam colliope and the tumbling clowns brought the procession to an end.

Representative Powers of Massachusetts is another devotee of the circus who formed a part of the interested group of statesmen who watched the parade. When he turned away, there was a smile on his face.

"I hope I will never be too old," he said, "to enjoy the smell of the saw-dust."

While in solemn deliberation the other day the president's cabinet was treated to a decidedly unique exhibition. Without the formality of being announced Kermit

Roosevelt stalked boldly into the cabinet room perched high upon a pair of stilts.

"I guess that's about enough for you," said the president as he arose and carried the youngster out, enjoining him never to interrupt again.

President Roosevelt does not believe in interfering with the pleasures of his children, but this performance of the youthful Kermit he appeared to regard as about the limit.

Superstitious persons around the White House are indulging in all kinds of speculations as to the political significance of a pair of crows building their nests in one of the tall trees in front of President Roosevelt's window.

Some of the political experts declare that it is bad luck to have the crows roost so close to the president's home, and various predictions are made concerning his political future if the birds are allowed to remain.

Uncle Jerry, colored messenger of the White House since Grant's first administration, who declares he is an expert on hoodoos, spells and superstitions of every description, says:

"When de crow build his nest close to a white man's house, it surely means good luck. De crow am a selfish bird and is always tryin' to get close to a good thing. Dese men what say dem birds is bad luck to President Roosevelt don't know nothin' about de nature of de crow."

SAMUEL HUBBARD.

THE MAN IN THE CHAIR

By ZOE ANDERSON NORRIS

Copyright, 1901, by Zoe Anderson Norris

DINNER was over, the table had been cleared away, and mademoiselle's oil lamp, which gave the same sort of light it had given the year before, which was next to no light at all, had been put in the middle of it by Florence of the Velvet Foot, whose mission it was to see to things, when the Story Teller looked across at me and began:

"Do you believe in spirits and ghosts and that?"

"I believe," I asserted sweepingly. "In everything you can't explain because there are so few things you can explain. Unless you do believe in those you can't explain there is very little left to believe in."

And I told her of an experience of my own. It had happened the week before. I was sitting writing to a little girl I love from whom I am indefinitely separated, and I was sad. Often I am sad without her, but as I wrote a feeling of unusually intense sadness came over me. I sighed and said aloud, "Oh, sister, sister!"

In three days I had a letter from her. "Friday at 4 o'clock—the hour at which I had written—a strange thing happened," she wrote. "I was in my room reading when I heard you call me, 'Sister, sister!' You called me twice. I heard you so distinctly that I ran to the door, opened it and looked out. I ran a little way down the stairs, expecting you to come up and meet me. What was it? Say."

"That," said the Story Teller, "was telepathy."

I nodded humbly, acquiescing. It is in the old country that you listen thus while people tell you what you have known all your life. It comes naturally with the meekness of thanking them for correcting your faults in languages.

She toyed with a letter in her hand. "This," tapping it, "is from a friend formerly a nonbeliever in the inexplicable, now converted. His conversion was like this: He laughed to scorn all our tales of superstition, particularly our belief that the spirit at the moment of death returns to the one best loved on earth or to its home. Whether it is that its last thought is of that person or that home, the fact remains. It has been known to happen again and again. And why not? The soul is an intangible thing. It is capable of any flight. Miles are nothing to it once released from this old body—leagues, millions of miles! But I must tell you the story. After that I will tell you the story of the Man in the Chair."

"I had sold a house once, I know."

"Well, anyway they sold the house. It was a fine old house. Like the officer, they had grown to love it. Upon leaving it the girl took pictures of it. She went around to each room—to the library, the dining room, the drawing room, the bedrooms. She took pictures of every nook and cranny from garret to cellar. She loved it so and regretted so the leaving."

"I seem to recognize in her a comrade," I interrupted—"a camera fiend. She probably took them for the pleasure of taking them partly, all those pictures."

"It may have been. Well, she was busy and hadn't time to develop them; so she took them to a photographer in London. A week later she called for them. He brought them to her in a little roll."

"They are very good," he said, unwinding one and holding it to the light. "Excellent—that is, with the exception of the Man in the Chair. That is a trifle indistinct. There is a kind of haze over it."

"The Man in the Chair!" she repeated. "I don't remember taking any Man in a Chair."

"Here it is," said he, producing it. "Sure enough, sitting in the library by the table was a man. He sat in a large chair with a tall oaken back. His head was bent on his hand. He was not reading or writing. He appeared to be just resting there awhile. But the most peculiar thing about the picture was the fact that he was without legs. Beneath the table two stumps only were visible."

"Taking the picture home, they wondered over it until finally the news came that the officer who formerly owned the place had died explained it. Dying his soul had flown straight back to the home he had loved. At the same time, photographing the room he had gone to, she had photographed with it him."

"But what about the legs?"

"Wounded on the battlefield, he had been carried to the hospital. There it was found necessary to amputate his legs. Immediately after the operation he had died."

I shuddered. The creepy feeling extended now from my head to my heels. I drew a long, deep breath that was akin to a groan.

At the same moment the lamp flickered. It flickered again. With a puff and a dying rush upward, it went out. I screamed wildly. I threw my arms on the table and fell there.

Somebody came flying in with another lamp.

"What's the matter?" I heard voices demand in a frightened chorus. "I say, what on earth's the matter?"

"Nothing," answered the Story Teller. "Only I was telling her the story of the Man in the Chair, and the lamp went out. She's not hurt, I think. She's scared; that's all."

"STANDING BEFORE THE BOOKSHELVES WAS A PRIEST."

TWO SOLDIERS OF SANTIAGO

[Original.]

Concha Alvarez was a pretty Cuban girl of Santiago de Cuba. In 1898, after the fighting was all over, Santiago being occupied by United States troops.

Concha, who was heart and soul in favor of free Cuba, was so grateful to the American liberators that she was ready to fall in love with the first United States soldier who presented himself.

Unfortunately two aspirants for her affections appeared about the same time. Major Archibald Thelford and Hospital Steward Julian Arnold. The major was a fine, handsome fellow of about thirty-five, the hospital steward a younger set of twenty-three. Concha seemed to favor the major. In the first place, he wore the shoulder straps of a field officer; in the second, his bearing was modest; in the third, he was a very handsome man. The hospital steward was not in the fighting part of the army, was not especially troubled with modesty and had a disagreeable way of referring to men mutilated by shot and shell, as though he took a grim satisfaction in their sufferings.

"Why don't you accept the major?" said her bosom friend. "He seems to be everything that is desirable."

"Because," replied Concha. "What do you especially require in the man you marry?"

"Bravery."

"Well, then, test them."

Concha was struck with this advice. She invited her lovers to call upon her the next day at the same hour and served coffee for them on the veranda. The major did not fraternize with the hospital steward, of course, but had the good sense not to ignore him entirely. The hospital steward had the assurance to treat the officer as if he were quite an inferior person. Concha sat with them serving coffee and chatting glibly.

"Ah, how hot it was," she said, "the day before the surrender! The cannon and the guns made such a noise, and then those funny machines that go tr-r-r-r-r, turning from right to left and left to right, as one would turn the nozzle of a hose! I thought I should go mad. And do you know that one great bombshell fell right here in the garden and the what do you call it—the fuse sputtered, and we all ran for our lives. But after awhile we came back, for it didn't explode."

"What did you do with it?" asked the major.

"It is in a corner of the back veranda. Would you like to see it?"

The major was indignant. The hospital steward thought he would not object. They rose from the table, Concha giving a singular laugh at the same time, which surprised both her suitors, for they saw nothing to laugh at. Then they went to the back veranda. Through the rear hall door they could see Joaquin, Concha's little brother, a boy of twelve, running wildly away to the back of the garden, with a lighted stick in his hand, and yelling at the top of his voice. Another moment explained the cause. The fuse of the unexploded bomb was spitting fire like a rocket on the Fourth of July. It was plain that the boy had been playing near it with fire and ignited it.

Concha as soon as she saw what had occurred gave a shriek and stood stock still, as if she had lost the power to save herself. The major darted back into the hall, crying: "Come away! You will be blown to atoms!" The hospital steward gave the bomb a quick glance, estimated that the fire of the fuse would not reach the bomb for some seconds and, rushing up to it, seized it, giving it a jerk to separate it from the bomb. To his astonishment, the bomb went sailing up in the air like a balloon. It was made of pasteboard.

Turning, he cast a look at Concha and, seeing as many sparks in her eyes as in the fuse, inferred that there was mischief in the wind. Then the two burst into a merry laugh.

"What did you do it for?" asked Arnold.

"Well, you see," stammered Concha. "I wanted to find out whether you or Major Thelford is the braver man."

"If you wanted to test my bravery, you should have cut off another inch of that fuse. I saw at a glance that there was plenty of time."

Then Concha explained that she had concocted the story of the real bomb, had made one of pasteboard and bribed her brother to ignite a firecracker fuse she put into it, giving him a loud laugh as a signal.

"But the major," said Concha ruefully. "After all, he is so handsome and so nice. What a pity he is not brave!"

"He is no major—that is, except in embryo, though he may make one in time. You can't develop a soldier in ninety days. Three months ago he was a floorwalker in a dry goods store."

"And what were you three months ago?"

"A new fledged graduate of the medical department of the University of —. I was graduated at the time this expedition started and, wishing to gain some surgical experience, came along as hospital steward. Our regiment is to sail soon for the north, and when we arrive I think I have influence sufficient to procure a discharge."

Concha Alvarez a year after the Santiago campaign married Dr. Julian Arnold, bade farewell to her father's hacienda and came to the United States to live. Arnold is a rising young surgeon. He is now sufficiently removed from his surgical freshness not to talk "shop" while at home. The major remained in the army and has since distinguished himself in the Philippines.

GOLD LINED CAVE FOUND IN A MINE

REMARKABLE DISCOVERY MADE BY BLASIERS

At Abbey Mine, Near Kendall, Fergus County, Montana—Brilliant Crystals and Gold Ore.

Helena, Mont., May 12.—A remarkable cave has been discovered at the Abbey mine, near Kendall, Fergus Co. The cave is about one hundred and fifty feet long, part of it being at an angle of 45 degrees and part perpendicular to the formation. Another unusual feature is that it is found in an immense ore body.

The main chamber of the cave presents a beautiful appearance, portions of the wall being decorated with masses of crystallized lime and silica, while from the lofty roof hang innumerable scintillating stalactites.

On the floor of the cave are hundreds of tons of cyanide gold ore, as rich as any found in the mine proper, averaging about $40 a ton, and one side of the cave is formed by the foot wall of the ore body.

The miners were drifting to connect with the main ore body, and at the end of the shift one evening set off a final blast for the day. Returning the next morning they discovered that the drift had been connected with a large cave, and preparations were at once made to explore it.

Thousands of crystal pendants, some as white as alabaster others with a golden tint, seemed to be trying to out-sparkle one another in the candle light. The walls, in places, glistened with their beautiful decorations.

From this beautiful crystal palace the explorers proceeded to the lower chamber. Three ladders were lashed together and lowered into the hole, but it was found that they were too short by at least forty feet. The chamber is about 18 feet square and its walls are perpendicular, as though squared by expert marble cutters. The color is that of the native rock—a lime formation.

It is a characteristic of this cave that the brilliant white crystal decorations have gold ore as a background, which serves to enhance their beauty. In picking off specimens the soft ore comes with them, and, as a rule, the crystallization is but a thin covering to the ore.

WOMEN CLEANED STREETS.
Cincinnati, May 12.—Armed with brooms, shovels, dishpans and other household contrivances, over 150 indignant women residents of Gilbert avenue this morning attacked the accumulated dust and dirt on the street. They claim the street has been cleaned but once since it was built in 1893 of crushed granite mixed with macadam. Sprinkling stopped when the Cincinnati street railway went out of existence. They will continue to sweep the street every morning until the city authorities have it done.

SEVEN DROWN.
Foo Chow, China, May 12.—The Japanese steamer Yukomaru has foundered on a rock off Santa. Seven of the crew were drowned.

CARNAGE WAS FEARFUL.
Port of Spain, Trinidad, May 12.—Advices from Carupano, which was attacked by land and sea May 6 by Government troops without the 24 hours' notice to non-combatants, say that the carnage was fearful. Foreigners are without assistance from their governments notwithstanding appeals and protests against the continued shelling of towns without giving non-combatants an opportunity to leave, are made. Correspondents have been requested to appeal to the United States for interference.

BEEF TRUST TO ADMIT VIOLATION

Chicago, May 12.—The plans of the packers to meet the charges of the government's petition for injunction are known and signs now point to a legal combat that will be utterly lacking in surprises. The packers will not resist the application of the government for a temporary injunction restraining them from violating the Sherman anti-trust laws. Their attorneys will admit in court on May 20 that the packers have been guilty of violations of this law and will not resist the granting of the restraining order. These admissions are to be made with the understanding that there is to be no criminal prosecutions.

DESPERATE

ENCOUNTER TAKES PLACE IN KENTUCKY.

SON RAN TO THE RESCUE OF HIS FATHER

And Slew Man Who Had Come to Murder—Son Pitched Into Battle—Used Knife.

Grayson, Ky., May 12.—Bob Hicks, aged 35, and "Bill" Smith, aged 38, both married, went to the residence of Thomas Packett, near Olive Hill, 15 miles from here, on the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad and called Packett to the doorway. When Packett put in his appearance the two men grabbed him and dragged him to the roadway. They were armed with knives, and began to make use of them on the defenseless man in true butcher fashion, when Packett's son, alarmed by his parent's cry, ran to his assistance.

William Packett, the son, took in the situation at a glance, and fired one shot at Hicks with a Winchester rifle. Hicks fell dead, his heart perforated by a bullet from the heroic lad's weapon. In the meantime the elder Packett was grappling with Smith for possession of the knife with which the unarmed man had already been slashed a number of times about the face and neck.

William Packett fired one shot at Smith as he was clinching with his father, and the bullet hit Smith in the forehead. Smith continued to stab Thomas Packett despite his wound and in the fear of slaying his father in the darkness the son cast his Winchester aside and pitched into the fray with a knife, which he used with most telling effect. Smith soon loosened his hold on the elder Packett and stumbled away weak from loss of blood, and fired by the struggle in which at first the odds were all on his side. Aside from the numerous stab wounds inflicted on him by young Packett, Smith suffered the bullet wound in the forehead. The ball evidently only caused a scalp wound, as the man continued to fight desperately after the shot was fired.

Despite the fact that his son came to the rescue within less than a minute after the two men landed on his father the elder Packett is horribly injured. He sustained 15 stab wounds in all, some of them measuring nearly a foot in length. One of his arms is all severed from the body. The member will have to be amputated. Most of his wounds are on the back, shoulders and neck, and while the blades in some instances penetrated deeply, it is not believed that the father was fatally injured.

He had a close call for life, as he lost a great deal of blood before a physician could be summoned. His condition, however, is critical, as blood poisoning is feared.

Packett the son, was cut in a number of places and sustained dangerous injuries, but it is believed he will recover. Smith has not been captured, although officers are on his trail. It is believed that he was so badly cut by young Packett that he cannot long elude arrest, if, indeed he has not already fallen exhausted and dying from loss of blood.

The differences between the men that resulted in the tragedy had their origin some time ago. Hicks and Smith were visitors at the Packett residence, and were picking the banyo when they got into an altercation with William Packett and James Spurlock. Hicks and Smith both used knives; on that occasion, it is said, and the Packett was witnesses against them at their trial. Their testimony is said to have been so damaging that both men swore to have revenge, and it is said they sought that when they called Thomas Packett to his door and began to slash him. Packett enjoys the reputation of a law abiding citizen and peaceable man, while Hicks and Smith, it is alleged, have figured in affairs that have caused them to be feared by many.

The man who hands around the collection box in church may be said to have a passing interest in religious matters.

Fido—"There goes Towser. He looks like the old scratch." Prince—"Yes, he's full of fleas."

A square meal is one that will go round.

Glittering opportunities are not always golden.
